What to Expect

Fractional resurfacing treatments are typically completed in under an hour, with a topical numbing cream applied for comfort. You'll need to avoid retinol, exfoliants, and sun exposure for several days leading up to your treatment, along with taking a prescribed anti-viral to reduce risk of complications.

Post-treatment, your skin will look red and feel warm, similar to a sunburn with mild swelling. Most patients plan for 3–5 days of downtime before returning to normal activities. Series of 3 treatments, spaced 6 weeks apart recommended.
